THREAD. This is an interesting argument from @steve_vladeck but my read of the 1898 case he cites doesn't seem to support his conclusion. Here's why:

Steve Vladeck @steve_vladeck

This is going to be an unpopular view, but here's me in the @nytimes on why, contra @neal_katyal and @gtconway3d, @realDonaldTrump's selection of Matthew Whitaker to be Acting Attorney General is likely constitutional, even if it's profoundly alarming:

The WSJ reveals how close we came to Stormy Daniels revealing their affair a week after the Access Hollywood tape.

Cohen - having missed the payment deadline, run out of excuses and unable to get Trump on the phone - says, "F*ck it, I'll pay it myself" wsj.com/articles/donal...

Mr. Cohen had told Mr. Davidson to expect a $130,000 wire transfer by Oct. 14, but missed the deadline, as well as an extension, prompting Ms. Clifford to walk away.

While Mr. Cohen considered a path forward, he offered excuses to Ms. Clifford's camp. He told Mr. Davidson banks were closed for the Jewish holidays and he couldn't reach Mr. Trump on the campaign trail. "My guy is in five states today," Mr. Cohen said.

Mr. Davidson told Mr. Howard on Oct. 25, 2016, that Ms. Clifford would soon speak publicly. Mr. Howard texted Mr. Cohen that they needed to coordinate "or it could look awfully bad for everyone."

In a tense three-way call on an encrypted app, Messrs. Pecker and Howard urged Mr. Cohen to complete the deal before Ms. Clifford disclosed the hush-money negotiations.

Out of options and time, Mr. Cohen decided to cover the payment himself. "F— it, I'm just going to do it," he told Mr. Davidson in a phone call.

He drew down his home-equity line and transferred $130,000 to Mr. Davidson on Oct. 27. Ms. Clifford signed a fresh nondisclosure

NEW: Here are another few pages of the intelligence community's talking points about Russia hacking prepared before 2016 election

I obtained this w/@_rshapiro/@PropOTP in response to our 2 yr old #FOIA lawsuit

The emails, however, are heavily redacted buzzfeednews.com/article/jasonl...

The U.S. Intelligence Community (USIC) is confident that the Russian Government directed the recent compromises of e-mails from U.S. persons and institutions, including from U.S. political organizations. The recent disclosures of alleged hacked e-mails on sites like DCLeaks.com and WikiLeaks and by the Guccifer 2.0 online persona are consistent with the methods and motivations of Russian-directed efforts. These thefts and disclosures are intended to interfere with the U.S. election process. Such activity is not new. In Moscow, the Russians have used similar tactics and techniques across Europe and Eurasia, for example, to influence public opinion there. We believe, based on the scope and sensitivity of these efforts, that only Russia's senior-most officials could have authorized these activities.

Some states have also recently seen scanning and probing of their election-related systems, which in most cases originated from servers operated by a Russian company. However, we are not now in a position to attribute this activity to the Russian Government. TheUSIC and the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) assess that it would be extremely difficult for someone, including a nation-state actor, to alter actual ballot counts or election results by cyber attack or intrusion. This assessment is based on the decentralized nature of our election system in this country and the number of protections state and local election officials have in place. States ensure that voting machines are not connected to the Internet, and there are numerous checks and balances as well as extensive oversight at multiple levels built into our election process.

Nevertheless, DHS continues to urge state and local election officials to be vigilant and seek cybersecurity assistance from DHS. A number of states have already done so. DHS is providing several services to state and local election officials to assist in their cybersecurity. These services include cyber "hygiene" scans of Internet-facing systems, risk and vulnerability assessments, information sharing about cyber incidents, and best practices for securing voter registration databases and addressing potential cyber threats. DHS has convened an Election Infrastructure Cybersecurity Working Group with experts across all levels of government to raise awareness of cybersecurity risks potentially affecting election infrastructure and the elections process. Secretary Johnson and DHS officials are working directly with the National Association of Secretaries of State to offer assistance, share information, and provide additional resources to state and local officials.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

- How activities related to the U.S. election show the U.S. attribute to Russia?
- The U.S. has high confidence in its attribution of the intrusions into the DNC and RNC, based on the forensic evidence identified by a private cyber firm and the U.S. government and understanding of cyber activity by the Russian Government.
- What about the disclosures that occurred after the DNC and RNC intrusions?
- The U.S. Intelligence Community (USIC) is confident that the Russian Government directed the recent compromises of e-mails from U.S. persons and institutions, including from U.S. political organizations. - How do the U.S. attribute the DNC and RNC intrusions to the Russian Government?
- The U.S. independently observed technical activity that is consistent with the Russian Government's cyber capabilities and a consistent with our general understanding of cyber activity by the Russian Government.
- Does the U.S. believe additional Russian action to interfere with our election is imminent?
- We expect that Russia will continue its efforts up to Election Day. In anticipation of these efforts, we have a contingency plan that we will not take any action on this issue until after the election and we have had sufficient opportunities to consult with the state. Right now, our priority is to help state officials ensure the security of their system. In the longer term, we want to work with state officials to help them understand the practical
